Biographical Sketch:

Lester M. Wolfson served as Indiana University South Bend's first and, to date, longest serving Chancellor. He oversaw the growth of IU South Bend from a two-year college into a university offering bachelor's and master's degrees. He also served as Professor of English at IU South Bend.

Wolfson was born on September 13, 1923, in Evansville, Indiana, and was raised in Grand Rapids, Michigan. Wolfson attended the University of Michigan where he received his bachelor's, master's, and doctoral degrees in English. Wolfson then taught in several academic institutions, including Wayne State University, University of Houston, University of California Santa Barbara, and Indiana University-Gary (now IU Northwest).

In 1964, Wolfson, then Associate Professor of English at IU-Gary, was appointed Director and Assistant Dean of the South Bend-Mishawaka Campus of Indiana University (now Indiana University South Bend). Wolfson was named Chancellor in 1969, a title he retained until his retirement in 1987.

Wolfson oversaw the growth and development of IU South Bend, overseeing the school's transition from a two-year college where graduates were expected to finish their degrees at the Bloomington campus to a full-fledged university independently offering bachelor's and master's degrees. Wolfson, an avid theatre and music enthusiast, fostered the growth of liberal and performing arts departments at IU South Bend by stressing their importance to both the university and community. During his tenure, Wolfson presided over the rapid growth of the IU South Bend's building stock, including the Schurz Library, for which Wolfson lobbied.

Wolfson died on February 10, 2017.

Scope and Content:

In order to preserve the integrity of the records, and to best reflect the context of their original creation and intended purpose, the materials in this collection are, when possible, organized in the order they were received (i.e., frequently, but not necessarily, chronologically or thematically). The collection is comprehensive, stretching from Wolfson's early collegiate career in the 1940s, through his tenure as Director, then Chancellor, at IU South Bend (1964-1987), until well after his retirement. Its contents include Indiana University correspondence between campuses, materials regarding IU South Bend campus and program development, IU South Bend Department/Division correspondence, materials regarding IU South Bend faculty, correspondence, publications, and transcripts of presentations.
